

Housing proposal excludes WSU

A proposal being considered by the Pullman City Council, designed to bring the city's substandard housing up to current health and safety codes, will not apply to student housing on campus.

William Bierbaum, director of housing and food service, said while the university does try to comply with city building codes, it does not have the funds to upgrade the Fairway and Washington Square housing complexes to meet standards which could be set by the city this spring.

The council is reviewing the uniform code for the abatement of dangerous buildings, a 1977 law outlining building standards and abatement proceedings for city buildings. The proposal being considered now is a uniform housing code, which is intended to compliment the older law.

Councilwoman and housing code proponent Anna Jim Erickson said the new proposal would extend the same types of requirements in the 1977 law which did not specifically include housing to rented housing units within the city.

The new proposal would require apartment complexes and boarding houses to be inspected every two to four years in order to obtain a license to operate.

A list compiled in 1976 includes approximately 300 addresses, Erickson said.

The council was told last week most are on College Hill.

City Director of Public Works, James Hudak, said that contrary to assertions made at a council study session last week, there are no fraternity or sorority houses on the list. The houses are inspected every year and the life-safety codes are strictly enforced.

Hudak also said that while the council could decide to set inspections at two- or four-year intervals, fraternities and sororities would still be inspected annually because of the number of persons living in each house.

City to study hiring

CITY — The Pullman City Council will decide tonight whether to authorize a "comparable worth" study examining city hiring practices at its 7:30 televised meeting in Murrow Communications Center, Studio B. KWSU channel 10 (channel 13 cable) will air the meeting.

City Finance and Affirmative Action Director Jack Tonkovich said the study will be an "attempt to insure there are no inherent biases in the city salary schedule."

The city has received criticism from Neill Public Library personnel claiming sexual discrimination with female's salary rates.

Tonkovich said he was "amazed" at the library's accusations, since it is the library board, not the city administration, which sets library salaries.

Still, Tonkovich said, "we want to do everything we possibly can to see that no discrimination is going on," so he is asking the council to authorize the study.

Tonkovich has been working with the Human Rights commission and the State Intergovernmental Commission, the latter which may provide half of the estimated $10,000 necessary to conduct the study.

The study could be underway by this fall, pending federal and state government approval. Tonkovich called it a novel, "off the wall" study which has not been tried by other communities.

The city and the consultant it hires may pattern the study after a similar one recently conducted at the UI. Tonkovich said.

The council will also decide whether to increase the Department of Public Safety's ambulance fee schedule, which would raise the base rate from $50 to $80 per ride. A $3 local mileage charge will also be added under the proposal, and the patient will be responsible for the payment of any medical supplies used while enroute to the hospital.

A refund schedule for Parks and Recreation Department programs will also be under consideration tonight. If a program participant chooses to withdraw during the first two sessions of class, he or she is entitled to a 75 percent refund if the resolution passes.

Also on the agenda is a motion to transfer $5,000 from the city Engineer's salary account to a weed control program.

Ten other items to be resolved by the council tonight include another public hearing on the Chipman-Brown addition, the adjustment of the Arterial Street Improvement program for the Turner Drive project, and a resolution recommending a bail schedule for animal control violations.

Funny money hits Pullman

CITY — The Pullman Public Safety Department has told local banks and businesses to be on the lookout for counterfeit money.

A phony $10 bill was passed at Alex's Restaurant sometime Thursday and discovered during the night's accounting procedures. Police have no idea who passed the bill, but Officer John Klei said it was "obviously counterfeit."

"The numbers were cockeyed, the print was blurry, and it just did not have anything a real bill has," Klei said.

However, Klei said the counterfeit money may not be possible to detect in a dimly lit area. The bill was sent to the U.S. Department of Treasury after a police investigation.
