

Pullman voters give nod to levy

Pullman voters approved this year's $1,250,000 school levy with 77 percent yes votes, Ray Smith, superintendent of schools said.

Of the 2,039 voting on the levy, 1,558 voted for and 481 against.

The levy, for maintenance and operation, will be about $3.17 per $1,000 of the new assessed evaluation of property within the school district. The property was recently reassessed at $400 million, more than double the previous assessment of $197 million, Smith said.

The levy will pay for 25 percent of the school district's $5 million budget, Smith said. The rest of the money will come mostly from state funds, with some coming from federal and other sources.

The school levy has not failed in Pullman for some time, Smith said. It failed on the first try in 1973, but was passed the second time.

The percentage of yes votes seen now is not unusually high for this area, Smith said. Last year, the levy passed with 85 percent yes votes. Other districts in the area had even higher percentages of yes votes.

"This shows evidence of community concern," Smith said. "People do value education here and continue to support it."

Housing applications available this Friday

by Cindy Kelly
contributing reporter

Applications and rental agreements for new groups requesting university single student apartments will be available Friday, according to Lee Wiggins, assistant director of Housing and Food Service.

The applications and rental agreements may be picked up in the Housing and Food Service office French 124, Wiggins said.

Wiggins said he encourages new groups to pick up the applications and mail them back as

Dixy mum about dope

OLYMPIA (AP) — Gov. Dixy Lee Ray has declined to say whether she will sign a bill legalizing medicinal use of marijuana.

The governor has said she would consult with the medical community before making that decision.

But she may already have her answer. The Washington State Medical Association has released results of a poll that show 80 percent of the 2,886 doctors responding favor the bill.

The measure would legalize use of marijuana to combat the debilitating side effects of cancer chemotherapy and radiation treatment and for treatment of glaucoma patients.

Check your bike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many Americans are breaking out their bicycles from winter storage to hit the road for both fun and exercise.

But before hopping on for a spin around the neighborhood, some basic maintenance is in order to make sure you have a safe vehicle.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission recommends a thorough check of the bike, tightening or adjusting any loose parts.
